

There is no data available at this time that would provide the total number of evictions undertaken on a no-ground basis. While we understand that the Department of Fair Trading undertakes a survey when bonds are returned, they do not collect demographic information such as age. We understand that our colleagues at the Tenants' Union of NSW have provided a comprehensive outline of the data available.

However, our data provided provides a clear indication of the growing magnitude of the problem and serious impact that it has on older people.

Data collection is a clear area for improvement for the government.
