Subject: CM: Post-mining land use inquiry - CRC TiME research

Good morning,

As noted, the Cooperative Research Centre for Transformations in Mining Economies (CRC TiME) is the world's only dedicated research organisation focused on mine closure and post-mine transitions.

Since 2020, we have commissioned a range of work that may be of interest to the Committee, including:

- Post-mining land uses, a review of post-mining land uses, including barriers to repurposing. It also includes 11 case studies in Australia.
- Post-mining land uses: A literature review, which reviews published work on repurposing of mine sites in Australia and globally.
- Understanding stakeholder values in post-mining economies: A literature review
- Collaborative planning for people navigated mine land transition: progress in Australia's Latrobe Valley (includes a collaborative planning approach of interest)
- Regional development aspirations for the Latrobe Valley and Gippsland
- Enabling mine closure and transitions: Opportunities for Australian industry. The report identified significant economic potential for local, regional and Australian enterprises delivering mine closure solutions equipment, technology and services, including facilitating repurposing of mined land.

Kind regards

Jillian
